

Environmental Engineering-The Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering at Bucknell University seeks applicants for a tenure-track faculty position starting in August 2013. Candidates should have an earned doctorate at time of appointment in Civil or Environmental Engineering or a closely related engineering field; ABD applicants will be considered. The Department anticipates the offering a new degree program in environmental engineering and seeks an additional faculty member. The position is open to all areas in environmental engineering. Expertise in systems, life-cycle assessment, and industrial ecology are particularly desirable.

An undergraduate environmental or civil engineering degree from an ABET-accredited program is preferred and professional and teaching experience is desirable. The successful candidate must have the ability to provide outstanding classroom and laboratory instruction for environmental engineering and introductory engineering courses and develop professionally through research and other scholarly activities. Successful candidates must demonstrate the ability to sustain a productive program of scholarship and a willingness to contribute to university and professional service. The appointed candidate will be encouraged to seek professional registration.

Bucknell University is a highly selective private university emphasizing quality undergraduate education in engineering and in the liberal arts and sciences. The enrollment is approximately 3400 undergraduate students and 150 masters-level graduate students. Bucknell University adheres to the principle that students learn best in an inclusive community and is therefore committed to excellence through diversity in its faculty, staff, and students. Thus, we seek candidates with a commitment to creating a climate that will foster the success of students with diverse backgrounds. Bucknell University welcomes applications from members of underrepresented groups. The university is located in Lewisburg on a 450-acre campus in central Pennsylvania's Susquehanna River Valley. New York City, Washington D.C., Baltimore, and Philadelphia are each within a 3 and 1/2 hour drive from Lewisburg. In addition to the BS in Civil Engineering, the department also offers MS degrees in Environmental Engineering and in Civil Engineering. Screenings of applications will begin immediately and will continue until the position is filled.
